Greetings,

It is that time of year again and the Hewgag Brays! It is time to meet again for our fall doins. I have decided that we shall meet at the historic LaGrange Dredge Camp outside of the town of LaGrange. This is a favorite spot of mine. There is a lot of history in this area if you pay attention. Starting with the French who found the area, the gold rush and even the Gold Dredge itself. There is more to be found if you just look hard enough. Please remember the buildings are very old and falling apart so stay out of them. The same rules apply now as in the past. Bring your PBC's in clean and sober. While here don't forget to visit our hawker's booth. Dust off your hats, wash your red shirts and come out for a great time seeing old friends and making new. And before I forget, Two (2) forms of identification will be needed to get in. Hope to see you there.

Sincerely;

Jeff Blom

Noble Grand Humbug, Estanislao Chapter 58

Wow! Our Clamp year is flying by! The Hewgag has brayed and it is time for our Fall meeting to commence! Our esteemed Noble Grand Humbug, Jeff "Santa Clause" Blom has decreed we meet at the La Grange Dredge Camp for fun, shenanigans, and a generally outstanding party. Beer trucks will be open ON TIME! And, we have horseshoes back! So grab a fellow redshirt, or two, and head up to the best little party in the west...a 58 Doins! Gentlemen, the buildings at the camp are older than some of our Greybeards....so please keep out of them. Make sure and bring a good attitude and enjoy the festivities. Hope to see all the brethren there. Satisfactory!

Bryan Sparks

Vice Noble Grand Humbug

Ready, set, let's go Clampin' and let's get this party started! The beer will be cold and open on time...So bring your P.B.C. clean, sober and the Hangman and I will take good care of them. Keep all fires off the ground. Remember to bring your I.D. and red card to gain entry. No weapons of any kind. Please leave drones at home. Don't forget to stop by the hawker and get the shirt and pin of the day, they also have a lot of new stuff to see. Let's keep the site clean. We will see you there.

Tony "YNOT" Bratton

Head Vigilante ECV 58

Well, Gentlemen, the time has come for you and your fellow Brethren to pull out the red shirt and black vest and come enjoy a great day of Clamperdom. NGH, Jeff Blom, has decreed that we will be returning to the Dredge Camp. There will be a few things different this time, so get ready! You want a beer as soon as you get there....you got it!

As always, same rules apply. Deliver your PBCs clean and sober, no guns, knives, rocket launchers, drag, or bad attitudes. And if you decide to over indulge, please utilize a brother of sobriety. Let's have a good time!

La Grange

by Chief E Stanislaw / Chapter 58 Historian

A group of French sailors jumped ship in San Francisco Bay, commandeered a small whaleboat, and set sail for the gold mines. Upon reaching a promising location on the Tuolumne River, they commenced mining and were rewarded for their desertion by discovering rich placers. The sailors sent word to friends and relatives and their small camp grew into quite a sizable settlement, known throughout the region as French Bar or French Camp. The year was 1849.

The name of the camp was changed to La Grange on December 2 of 1854, when the post office was established, with Dr. Louis M. Booth as the first postmaster. Meaning "the barn" in French, the origin of this name is unclear. Maybe an inhabitant of the camp was from La Grange, Georgia. Perhaps it was taken from a well-known singer of the late 1840's and early 1850's, Anna Caroline de La Grange, Countess of Stankowitch. Perchance a calculating fan of the famous French mathematician, Joseph Louis Lagrange, made his feelings known. Quite possibly, the post office's location in an old adobe barn had something to do with it.

By 1856, La Grange had become the center of trade for a wide area. The town's population numbered in the thousands, a substantial portion of whom made up the camp's Chinatown, where "Feuds were numerous, shooting scrapes were not infrequent and gambling and fan tan the daily practice." The Miners and Business Men's Directory listed 215 merchants, miners, artisans, hotel keepers, attorneys and physicians located in town. There were also syrup makers, two brewers, three butchers, a barber, gunsmith, blacksmith, billiard saloon, traders, painters, numerous restaurants, and D. H. Woods, the Daguerrean. At it's height, La Grange had 4000-5000 residents, and was served by 3 stage lines. A ferry also operated here, 1st by Nathan McFarland, and later by Anthony B. McMillan. It was used from the early 1850's until about 1880, when a bridge was finally built across the river.

Three stage lines served the busy settlement, offering daily service to such spots as Stockton, Knights Ferry, Mariposa, Montezuma, Chinese Camp, Jamestown, Sonora, and Columbia. The town's fraternal organizations included a Masonic Lodge which was organized in May of 1856, and the Odd Fellows, who formed Lafayette Lodge No. 65 on June 14 of 1857, the first in the county. The rich bottom lands along the river developed into fine agricultural producers and a flour mill was erected by John Talbot & Co.

La Grange had become an important city, and in January of 1856, it became the county seat of Stanislaus County, which it remained until 1862 when the seat was voted away to Knights Ferry. By this time the easily obtained placer gold had been mined out, and many of the prominent lawyers, merchants and businessmen followed the county seat to Knights Ferry. Mining activity continued well into the 1870's; however, thanks to some $5 million being spent on the construction of ditches to carry water to nearby hydraulic diggings.

While many of the mining camps of the Gold Country were extinguished by fire, La Grange's friend was fire's foe: Water, lots of water and flood. The first flood coming in the winter of 1851/52, leading to the town being moved to higher ground. In 1856, high waters washed away John Talbot's flour mill, also doing damage to the farm lands near the river. In the winter of 1861/62, the water rose again. Many Chinese reworking the deposits along the river were drowned as the flood swept away everything in its path. Houses were destroyed, crops ruined. Louis Booth, his boy, and their dog spent two nights in a tree as the river raged past below. They were later rescued by a pioneer La Granger, Peter Ducot, seconds before the tree gave way.

La Grange is located twenty-one miles out of Coulterville via Hwy 132. La Grange is now a registered California Historical Landmark historic district. Today, a post office and elementary school (as of fall, 2015, after a brief stint as a charter school, the public school was closed) still operate in La Grange. Also functioning is the oldest church in Stanislaus County, St. Louis Roman Catholic Church, with a cemetery containing tombstones dating to the mid-1800s.

The Proctorscope

by Al Menshew, XSNGH etc

Greetings, devotees of the red shirt and black hat and to those who owe their allegiance to St. Vitus. Our fall meeting is fast approaching and it seems that we just finished with the spring doin's. As some of you know, I received the enobling Staff of Relief at Patterson township in October of 1965, our year 5969.

As is typical of someone my age, I was remembering various situations I have observed in my fifty some odd years of Clamperdom. Some of my most fun memories occurred on my first TRASH (Transierra Association of Senior Humbugs, a club within a club) trip across the Black Rock desert. There were about thirty vehicles in our little caravan as we sped across the Black Rock Playa. We were riding in XNGH Al Golub's van which we christened The Green Machine. We were motoring along quite rapidly and talking to the other vehicles when someone shouted into the CB, "Oh Shiiiiitt!!" It was Gene Chamberlain, a college professor who normally wouldn't say shit if he had a mouthful. It seems that he had cleared a dry wash and was airborne for several seconds. He came out ok although his car suffered a bit.

You will find this hard to believe, but our first night on the desert, XNGH Lloyd Ploutz layed some shit on some guys from another chapter. We were sleeping outside on cots and the next morning, without waking Ploutz, the other chapter guys dug a grave alongside Ploutz's cot and his first wake-up was to be dumped into the grave and being partially buried before he got fully awake. As I recall, he didn't give nobody no shit after that episode.

On another trip, we were motoring along in a military duck. We stopped at a bar named Poor Reds, near Placerville, as I recall. Being somewhat of a light weight, I bedded down in the duck, early. The local ladies in the bar wanted a tour of the duck and while they touring, one of the slipped and fell right on my face. Apparently I looked up, said, "Thank you Lord", rolled over and went back to sleep. Who says prayers aren't answered.

The TRASH group was up at East Gate, Wyoming and a group, later to become the East Gate Men's Breakfast Club (I may have the name wrong) decided to show Earl Schmidt XSNGH what Clampers really dressed like. Earl had been bitching about modern day Clampers looking more like cowboys and less like miners. They showed up at his tent at daybreak with the most garish garb you could imagine. The group still comes to the Grand Council Sunday morning with their East Gate clothes. You can't miss them. On that same trip, we had lost an XSNGH named Carl Briggs a few months earlier. A couple of his buddies Cappy Cook, XSNGH and another clamper, whose name I can't remember took off their Clamper garb, went out in the desert, loaded their black powder rifles and fired a volley of Carl's ashes into the sunset. A fitting way to end it all. There was another firing of ashes up in Virginia City, which I understand was done with a small cannon. The ashes were originally Clicker Slocum. A very talented artist, musician and all around raconteur. His main claim fame was that he knocked Teddy Kennedy silly with right forearm to the head in a rugby game in prep school. In Clampers, you meet all sorts.

That's enough trip down memory lane. Hopefully, you are making your own memories of good times at Clamper doins'. I'll see you at the diggings.

Dear Brothers,

As many of you know, Chapter 58 sent out a survey on our Facebook page a few months ago. We asked basic questions like: "Did you like the doin's", "what would you change", etc. We are happy to say we had more than 350 responses. Some were good and some were bad, but ALL very enlightening.

The Officers and Board of Directors want you to know that we listened. Here are some the things that we are doing to address those concerns:

- 1) The beer trucks will open promptly at 10:00 a.m.
- 2) We have a band and they will be there.
- 3) We have brought back the horseshoe tournament
- 4) We are making the doins a little more accessible for sponsors with their PBC's.

Without you, the redshirts, participation, we would not survive as a chapter. Please keep the suggestions coming and we will do our best to accommodate.

Hope to see you at the Fall Doin's at the LaGrange Dredge Camp,
